NOTICE

Our Guide is an extract from the books of the cemetery, and we have done our best to make it as complete as possible. However, it may be that, notwithstanding our efforts and good will, some mistakes have occurred. Should it be so, the persons made to suffer through such omissions, are requested to call at the office of the Fabrique where we will thankfully receive their remarks and see that justice is done to them in our next edition.

PREFACE

The Church has always kept a watchful eye over the mortal remains deposited in her cemeteries, as a vigilant mother watches over her slumbering children, and, in order to protect these sacred precincts against desecration, she places them under her safe-guard. In her cemeteries, she proclaims, in the face of death, the immortality of the soul and the resurrection of the bodies. We will see that this creed, which is presently ours, was duly honored in ancient times. After setting forth this historical fact, we give a short sketch of the first catholic cemeteries of Montreal followed by a table of deaths, from the year 1642 to the present day. Our work also comprises the modified rules and regulations of the Fabrique of Notre Dame, respecting the registration of deaths and the administration of the cemetery, together with a topographical plan of and a Guide to the present cemetery.

We have full confidence that our little book, with such useful information, will be welcome everywhere, both in the humble house of the artisan and in the mansion of the millionnaire.

CHAPTER I

FUNERALS AND SEPULTURES IN ANCIENT TIMES

Respect for the dead, pious attention for their remains, religious pomp in funerals, general veneration for burial places, are to be found in all ages, in every clime and among all nations, from the remotest times to the present day.

Always and everywhere, among the ancient, funerals and sepultures were considered as religious acts and were accompanied with ceremonies of public worship, because all nations, says Cicero, "believe that they have certain duties to perform towards the souls of the dead."

In Egypt, funerals were accompanied with great pomp and the tombs were magnificent. Oftentimes they were under excavations through a rock and were reached by means of a flight of stairs and a subterraneous passage. Temples were erected around these tombs and this explains why a large number of mummies were found in the necropolis of Memphis.

It is well known that the Egyptians embalmed the bodies of the dead, and this custom is a proof that they believed in their resurrection. The embalming process was performed by a priest, and priests occupied a prominent place in the funeral procession. Frescos discovered by archæologists represent priests carrying the mummy to the foot of a small altar. The relatives make the usual offering, and priests, standing at one side of the altar, with shaven heads and covered with leopard skins, recite the prayers of the ritual and offer incense to the deceased, in a perfuming-pan In some wall paintings, priests are seen offering sacred prayers over the body of the dead.

According to Herodotus, "the mourning and funeral rites of the Assyrians very much resembled those of the Egyptians."

Among the Hindoos, the presence of the priest, Bramin, is required at the funeral repast which, far from being a rejoicing, is an austere and serious ceremony, in honor of the deceased over whose remains the priest, with uncovered head and bare feet, has already recited the usual prayers, in a low tone of voice.

The sepulture of the dead was considered among the Hebrews as being a divine precept. For this reason, a king of Assyria having slain a large number of Jews and forbidden that they should be buried, Tobias, who had the fear of God more at heart than that of the king, carried the bodies away, hid them in his house and buried them during the night. The Talmud determines the form and size of the sepulchres, and points out that a small vestibule must be provided, wherein to place the corpse, so that the prayers for the dead may be recited over it.

The Gauls, whom everything shows to have had a firm belief in the immortality of the soul, honored their dead with pompous funerals in the forests which were for them real temples. There, the priests erected altars for the sacrifice, and there also was erected the funeral pile upon which was placed everything that had belonged to the deceased, even his slaves.

The Germans consecrated dark and thick forests, where they adored the divinity. Their priests presided over all funerals, which were simple and without pomp. Their tombs were merely small grass-plots, for, costly monuments, erected through pride, appeared to them to be a burden over the remains of the dead. They wasted but very little time in tears and lamentations, but devoted much of it to grief and regret, for, they said, tears belong to women and remembrance to men: Feminis lugere honestum est, viris meminisse.

In Greece and in Rome, funerals, whether by burial or by incineration, were always most solemn. The poems of Homer, Sophocles and Virgil, which are a true picture of the customs of ancient times, stand as an evident proof of this. At almost every page, in the Iliad, are found the details of famous battles fought to take away from the enemy the bodies of the heroes who have fallen, so that they may be duly honored with sepulture. No more sacred duty is imagined and the gods themselves interfere to have it fulfilled. Thus, through the intervention of a god, Achilles decided to give up to Priam the body of his son Hector. Nay, he did more, for he ordered the body to be covered with a rich mantle and a fine tunic, and also to have it washed and perfumed, stretched on a couch and placed on a splendid chariot.

Several of Sophocles' tragedies are based upon the fact of funerals and sepulture. In Ajax, this hero, on the point of death, invokes Jupiter and prays him to look after his sepulture and to protect his mortal remains against the insults of his enemies. It was veneration for the dead that inspired Sophocles with writing Ædipus to Colone, and the same inspiration brought the Supplicants from the pen of Euripides, and the seven Chieftains in front of Thebes from that of Æschylus. The choice of funerals and sepulture as the subject of these tragedies shows how important they were considered among the Greeks. The following fact, which, if not reported by Xenophon and Diodorus of Sicily, would be incredible, proves it in a manner even more evident. Ten Athenian Generals having neglected to bury with due honors the soldiers killed in the battle of the Arginusæ, were all condemned to death, although they had won the victory. True, by their valor they had saved Athens, but, by their negligence, they had lost thousands of souls whose salvation depended upon sepulture. The salvation of souls was considered of more importance than the safety of the country, among the ancients.

Among the Greeks, the burial grounds were the first monuments dedicated to the gods, and tombs were asylums of refuge, as well as the temples.

The great legislators, Solon at Athens, and Lycurgus at Sparta, had regulated the most minute details of funerals, the supervision of which was entrusted to the priests.

The same veneration for the dead and respect for sepultures is found among the Romans as among the Greeks. All of them, with the exception may be of a few followers of the stoic philosophy, were true to this principle and considered sepulture as the most important of all acts, for the Romans had a strong belief in the immortality of the soul. They considered places of burial as sacred ground and the Digest has a special title for the laws protecting sepulture.

Funerals had an eminently religious character among the Romans who associated therewith a creed which, alone, can lead us to understand the errors into which paganism had led humanity: paganism had made gods of the dead. The Greeks called them genii, the Romans lares, manes or penates. "Our ancestors, said Cicero, decided that men who had left this world should be classed among the gods." The tombs were the temples of these divinities. "When the body had been consumed on the funeral pile, the ashes were gathered in urns, which, in their turn, were placed in columbarias or niches resembling pigeon's nests. These niches were made in the walls of the sepulchral chamber. The four sides were closed and they sometimes attained a considerable height. Over this mortuary chamber were rich apartments, for the use of the family,when they gathered together to perform certain religious ceremonies over the remains of their relatives."

In Rome, funerals were accompanied with all the pomp of religion. They were so called because, primitively, burials took place during the night and the chief mourners carried twisted cords (funalice) in lieu of torches. Later on, night burials took place among the poorer classes only. But,whether public, funus publicum, or private and unaccompanied with demonstrations, funus tacitum, funerals always carried with them a religious character. The pontiffs and priests had charge of all that pertained to obsequies. When a Roman citizen died, his body was cleansed and embalmed, it was then wrapped up in white linen, which is a symbol, says Plutarch, of the purity and immortality of the soul, and it was then placed on a couch in front of which was erected an altar with perfumes burning thereon.

Priests occupied a prominent place in the funeral procession. At the funeral-pile or at the place of burial, the priest again, with a laurel branch in his hand, purified those present, and he also gave the signal to retire, by pronouncing the last words. On the ninth day following that on which death took place, it was the priest also who performed the most important of all the ceremonies, by thrice throwing earth upon the tomb. From this moment, the place of burial became a sacred spot and no one was allowed to touch it, except with the permission of the prince or the pontiffs.

This brief historical sketch shows, beyond a doubt, how, in ancient times, veneration for the dead and respect for places of burial were universal. We will find the same sentiments to be quite as general and as strong among modern nations, and a study of their customs will show that they have remained true to the traditions of past ages.

CHAPTER II

FUNERALS AND SEPULTURES AMONG MODERN NATIONS.

We will commence our study of funeral ceremonies, among modern nations, by referring first to those where the protestant religion predominates, reserving for later on the catholic nations: France, Belgium, Italy, Spain.

In England, Scotland, the North German Confederation, Holland, Denmark, Sweden, Norway, where protestants are in a large majority, we find them everywhere having an equal sense of their duties towards the dead, and calling upon religion to preside over funerals and accompany the remains of friends and relatives to their last resting place. In cities, the body of the deceased is carried to the church where the pastor raising his voice says: "Brethren, let us pray." Prayers are then recited and meditations gone through, texts of the Holy Scriptures most appropriate to the circumstance being quoted. The following beautiful sentences are pronounced: "After death comes judgment. Be on your guard; watch and pray.—I am resurrection and life.—Whosoever believeth in me, although he be dead he shall live; and whosoever liveth and beliveth in me shall never die." Funerals among protestants are solemn and religious, and they profess a great and profound respect for the place where the dead are buried.

The Jews, disseminated throughout the whole world, deny the divinity of Jesus Christ, but believe in God and in the immortality of the soul. When one of their number dies, they bow down to the will of God and say: "Master of the universe, I have committed many faults in Thy presence, and Thou hast not inflicted upon me one thousandth part of the punishment which I deserve." The Jews have a manual of prayers for the dead. These are recited over the tomb of the deceased person, who, in Judæa, is supposed to rest in the valley of Josaphat, under the shade of the temple of Solomon. Obsequies always have, among them, a religious character. The Rabbi is present and, at the cemetery, offers prayers, with the parents of the deceased, for the repose of his soul.

The anniversary of the death of a relative is a day of mourning, and, each year, they honor the memory of their dead by fasts, alms, and prayers, both in the temple and at the cemetery.

A very impressive legend, of which the following is a summary, shows the resignation of the Jews to the decrees of Divine Providence :

Béruria, wife of Rabbi Meir, a doctor in Israel, has just seen her two young sons expire in her arms. Her efforts to bring them back to life are fruitless and their bodies remain icy-cold. All at once, she begins to think of her husband just then expounding the divine law, in the temple, and shudders at the idea of the grief which awaits him.

She then places her two children on a couch, covers them with a pall, and, wiping away her tears, she awaits the return of her husband, with apparent calm. He soon arrives, and his first words are : " Where are the children ? " Béruria answers not. " Where are the children ? " repeats the father, already beginning to feel uneasy.

" Listen ! says then Béruria, yesterday, a friend of ours came here and gave me in charge two costly jewels, which he now already claims back Alas ! I did not think that he would ask them so soon. Am I to deliver them or keep them longer ?"

— "Wife, what are you asking ?"

— "But those jewels are so brilliant and please me so much !"

— "Do they belong to us ?"

— "If you only knew how precious they are for us both !"

— "Béruria, exclaims the Rabbi, what is the meaning of those words ? What ! keep a thing which has been entrusted to us ! Think of it !"

—"You are right, replies the poor mother, weeping, come then, and I will show you the jewels which me must return !"

She then takes him by the children's bed-side and, lifting the pall : "Here, she says, are the treasures which God asks back from us !"

At such a sight, the father weeps bitterly and exclaims : "Oh ! my children, oh ! my poor children !"

—"Rabbi, then adds Béruria, have you not just told me that we must return a treasure entrusted to our care, when the owner claims it ?"

The father, with tears running down his cheeks, and eyes uplifted to heaven, then exclaims :

"Oh ! my God, could I murmur against thy will, when thou leavest by my side so strong and so virtuous a wife !"

The unfortunate parents then sat in the dust, tore their garments, and, covering their heads with ashes, repeated the words of Job: "God had given them, God hath taken them back from us. Blessed be the name of the Lord!"

The same veneration for the dead and respect for sepulture are found in Russia, where there are eighty million inhabitants, whose territory includes half of Europe and whose domination constantly increases in Asia.

Russia is a christian nation, separated from the Catholic Church on a single capital question: they admit no other chief of the Church but Jesus Christ, and reject the supremacy of the Pope and his jurisdiction over the universal Church. The head of the Russian Church is the Czar who, according to an ukase of Paul 1st, is the chief chosen by God himself, in all religious or civil matters. But there is reason to hope that Russia will, some day, abandon this schism, for, as Father Schouvaloff, of the barbanite order, says, "the Russians have not uselessly preserved the devotion to Mary, among the treasures of their faith, and it is not uselessly that they invoke her and believe in her Immaculate Conception and keep its festival..... Yes, Mary shall be the link which will unite the two Churches and make of all those who love her, a nation of brethren, under the paternal care of the vicar of Jesus Christ."

As might be expected, in this holy Russia, as its inhabitants call it, funerals are surrounded with religious pomp and sanctified by the prayers of the priest.

The funeral procession advances headed by the pope, with his long beard and floating hair and assisted by a deacon. Having reached the place of burial, incense and holy water, which is to purify him of his sins, are used over the body of the deceased, and the pope recites the prayers of the liturgy. Russians consider it an honor and feel happy when they can secure future burial in a monastery. For this reason, princes have oftentimes taken the monastic garb, in the last days of their life.

Let us now study the funeral customs among the Mussulmans, in Africa and Asia, where they number over one hundred millions.

The followers of Mahommed, who look upon him as the envoy of God and the last of the prophets, thus formulate their creed: "God alone is God, and Mahommed is his prophet." The Koran, book dictated by God himself to Mahommed, reveals, in several places, the belief in the resurrection of the bodies. The natural consequence of this belief is the intervention of religion in the funerals of Mahommedans. If the deceased be a person of importance, the marabout or the mufti presides the funeral. In other cases, the dervis visits the house of the dead person where he recites prayers. When these prayers are over, those present gather around the body to have the advantage of carrying it, for the prophet has said: "Each step that you shall make, carrying a dead body, will be rewarded with the remission of ten sins." As the procession advances, it steadily increases in number, all those who meet it being anxious to join, in order to obtain, according to the promise of the prophet, the remission of one sin, by following the dead body "for a distance of forty paces."

Here now is a funeral in Egypt. The procession advances headed by priests, and, winding its way under the shade of sycamores and palm trees, and among minarets with golden crescents, it reaches the mosque which has been embellished by artists of genius who, very often, have made of it a real marvel. After leaving the mosque, the body is taken to its last resting place, where the iman, raising his hands as high as his face, five times exclaims: "God is the greatest." He then recites other prayers, and, after the burial has taken place, one of the relatives thrice throws a handful of earth over the body, saying, the first time: "Thou hast been created out of it"; the second time: "To it I (God) will return thee"; the third time: "From it I (God) will draw thee anew." All then depart, every one again repeating the solemn profession of faith: "God is God, and Mahommed is his prophet."

In India, where islamism has twenty five million adherents, the doctrines are based on the same principles, but the rites are modified, indian gorgeousness and pomp taking the place of mussulmanish simplicity and rigidness. There, even more than elsewhere, the mussulman makes it a duty to celebrate the anniversaries and feasts of the dead with prayers, ablutions and alms. There, more than in Europe and Africa, tombs are honored and their care is entrusted to the mullas or priests.

In Asia, on the indian continent, the people are given up to the basest fetichism and to the greatest idolatry, out of which courageous missionaries, following the footsteps of the glorious apostle of India, strive, not without good success, to draw them. Those nations adore more than three hundred million gods: the sun, the moon, the sea, the rivers, the mountains, animals, mineral substances. Nothwithstanding these profound errors, the Hindoos believe in the immortality of the soul, hope in the rewards of a future life, and tremble in view of the punishments which Yama, judge of the dead, can inflict upon the wicked, in their Naraca or hell. A proof of this creed is found in the funerals. When a Hindoo is about to die, a bramin is called for the expiatory ceremony, and the patient is exhorted to recite internally, if he cannot do so distinctly, certain prayers by the virtue of which he will be delivered of his sins. Once he is dead, and after the sacred ablutions and purifications have taken place, his body is carried to the spot where it is to be consumed. There, the son of the deceased, striking his breast and taking from a bronze vase the sacred fire which he has brought with him, kindles the stake while the bramins recite prayers and those present utter plaintive cries. It was the custom, up to about ten years ago only, for the widow to throw herself into the flames, to die with her husband.

China, like India, is an idolatrous country. In the pagodas, which abound there, can be seen statues of Bouddha, with enormous eyes, thick lips and hanging ears. Several bonzes or priests officiate in these pagodas.

Religious sentiment is universal in China, and from the emperor himself, descendant of the sun, down to the most humble peasant, all are faithful worshippers of Bouddha. Moreover, the Chinese considering the hour of death as most solemn, always demands the help of religion more earnestly, at this supreme moment.

As soon as a sick person becomes in danger, a sacrifice is at once offered in the pagoda, and those present prostrate themselves, while the bonzes offer prayers. When death has come, the sacrifices are again commenced in the deceased's house, which is all draped in white, as a sign of mourning. These sacrifices take place in front of those tablets " which, in the absence of the so consoling catholic dogma of the communion of the living and the dead, have, at least, the advantage of disputing to nihility the names of ancestors, by causing their memory to be honored." The name of the deceased is added on these tablets, and it is also inscribed in the pagoda, to be kept there for three generations.

Religious ceremonies are held during the nights which immediately follow the date of death.

The bonzes, carrying lanterns, come in and chant their prayers. During the first night, they break a number of tiles, in order to make a breach in the gates of hell and deliver the soul, if it is already detained there. On the second night, they assist the son of the deceased, when, raising a long bannerol, he represents the soul of his father taking its flight to heaven. On the third night, they set fire to the bannerol and burn a certain quantity of paper-money, so that the deceased may not be without funds in the other world.

Bonzes preside over the funeral procession, when, to the sound of timbals, flutes and drums, it marches to the place of interment. The Chinese attach so much importance to solemn funerals, that simple workingmen submit themselves to all kinds of privations, and families ruin themselves, in order to provide magnificent obsequies for one of their own.

Disrespect for the dead is severely punished by law, and the desecration of tombs is ranked among the capital and irremissible crimes. In Japan, where there are ninety-eight thousand temples of Bouddha, for thirty-three million inhabitants, the procession of the bonzes is a most picturesque sight. Arrayed in their yellow surplices, some carrying long canes with bannerols attached, others moving paper flowers in the air, as a symbol of the arrival of the soul of the deceased in the abode of the blest, these priests proceed to the place of cremation. They are accompanied with noisy music, singing and clamors. The procession winds its way on the heights where the funeral pile is erected. The chief of the bonzes goes around the pile, three times, and, passing over his head a lighted torch, throws it on the ground. The nearest relative of the deceased then takes up this torch and sets fire to the pile.

Leaving the old world, we come to the new, where the greatest diversity and, at the same time, the greatest freedom of worship are to be found. Protestants, catholics, jews, live there together, each one practising his own religion, with full liberty. We have already shewn how protestants and jews honor the dead and respect sepultures.

We have now to examine the catholic nations: France, Belgium, Spain, Italy, and we will find that veneration for the dead, religious funerals, and respect for cemeteries, are still more prevalent among these nations. It could not be otherwise, for the catholic religion has a tender love for the dead, taking part in and presiding over their funeral, and giving a solemn blessing to the ground destined to be their last resting place.

When a catholic is about to die, the holy Church which received him when he came into the world, which furnished him with all possible help and consolation, in all the trials of life, again hastens near his death-bed. The ministers of the Church visit him frequently and exhort him to resignation, peace of the soul and hope. Finally, they comfort him with the holy sacraments, the last of which, as Pius IX said, "has the special virtue of fortifying man, at the moment of the solemn passage from time to eternity."

After a catholic is dead, the Church whose care and anxiety have been to save his soul, is not yet through with its task. This kind mother's solicitude extends to the body, as is shown at the time of the funeral. The priests, arrayed in their sacerdotal vestments and headed by the cross, proceed to the vestibule of the church, there to receive the body from the hands of the desolate relatives. After blessing it, they conduct it in procession inside the temple. The relatives and friends follow, silent and collected, and strangers who pass by stop and uncover their heads, reverently bowing, not to death, but to immortality.

The corpse has now reached the centre of the church whose drapings of deep mourning indicate grief and sorrow, and the candles which burn around the coffin, show that the soul, which survives our wordly cares, has passed from darkness to light.

In the service for the dead, which is read and chanted, in the presence of the corpse, the Church shows its ardent love of souls and its invincible faith in the justice and mercy of God, and to express these sentiments in a becoming manner, the Old and New Testament have contributed admirable texts.

The clergy again go in a procession and surround the coffin, for the last absolution or absoute, during which the dead body is, so to speak, encircled with prayers. At this moment also, holy water is springled over the deceased, to purify him of his sins, and incense is made to spread its perfume around these remains destined to future immortality. The priest then, always reciting prayers, accompanies the corpse to the cemetery, where it is to rest under the protection of the cross. Here the final parting takes place, a parting so painful! and one the grief of which can be alleviated by religion only, which teaches that this so much dreaded tomb receives, after all, but mortal remains, while the soul has already gone to the bosom of infinite mercy.

On this spot, the priest recites the last prayers, over the open grave, and gives his last blessing. The friends and relatives afterwards plant yew-trees and cypress-trees around the tomb, as an expression of their mourning ; they place on this tomb wreaths of immortal-herbs, which are an emblem of the crown of immortality; they strew the ground with those flowers which the deceased used to love most, but they never forget to place there a cross, that sublime and glorious standard, foundation of all our hope.

Nothing, among catholic nations, can diminish their veneration for the dead and their respect for places of sepulture. Thus, in Canada's former mother-country, France, even during the most disastrous days and when war against religion is most bitter, these sentiments are as vivacious and as ardent as ever.

Behold an All-Souls-day in Paris itself, when all the places of burial are crowded with pious and silent visitors. From the time of opening the gates until they are closed, the three large cemeteries of the great capital are constantly being visited, and multitudes of human beings can be seen following, without interruption, the roads that lead to the city of the dead. The whole family takes part in this solemn pilgrimage, and the husband, wife and children each carry a flower pot, a wreath, or, if they be too poor, a simple flower. Once they have reached the cemetery, their first care is to visit the tomb of the regretted one. The wife and children go on their knees to pray, and the husband, with head uncovered, stands by, in respectful attitude; but, generally, overcome himself with grief, he also falls on his knees and joins in prayer with his family. Then, talking in a low tone of voice, as if fearing to trouble the repose of the dear departed one, they proceed to make the toilet of the tomb; the withered wreaths and flowers are removed to be replaced by those just brought over, and, after a prolonged and solemn look on this sacred spot, they take leave of the cherished one, but not without turning round several times, to give a last farewell to the beloved being left behind.

Here, in our dear catholic city of Montreal, this impressive scene can be witnessed, not only on All-Souls-day, but every day during the fine season, and especially on Sundays, when pious bands are constantly seen winding their way, like moving waves, up the steep mountain, which they ascend with a light step, encouraged as they are by the hope of being,very soon, by the side of the beloved remains of departed relatives. Veneration for the dead and respect for sepultures have, indeed, always been great in our dear and beautiful country, and the first settlers who came from France, at a time when that nation was one of the most catholic in the world, carried, in their hearts, this precious germ of faith, which has taken root so deeply in our midst.

An authentic document from the registers of the Fabrique of Notre Dame, dated a few years only after the foundation of Montreal, shows what respect our ancestors had for the dead, and how great their veneration was for the souls in purgatory.

It was on the 16th of October 1690, when several merchants of the city, after discussing the matter, adopted the following resolution :—

" We, the undersigned, merchants of Ville-Marie, seeing how we are threatened, on every side, with calamities, and in order to allay the wrath of God, have resolved, after imploring the help of the Holy Virgin, to take and select the holy souls of purgatory as our protectors in heaven, and, confident in the help expected, we promise them not to sell any merchandise to the inhabitants of this parish, on holidays and Sundays, except eatables, which can be used up during the day, such as oil, vinegar.....

" As regards strangers of surrounding localities, we will sell nothing to them, without a written permit from the Rev. parish priest, or another priest of the Seminary.

" And in order that they (the souls in purgatory) may obtain for us what we ask of them we have resolved to have a chapel built for them, next to the chapel of St. Joseph, in front of the vestry, there to hold the services which it may be thought proper to hold, for the repose of souls."

In order to be more faithful to this promise, the signers had imposed a fine upon those who should act in contravention therewith. This strong and practical faith of our ancestors is again found, nowadays, as vigorous as it was then. Yes, indeed, we are happy to state that our compatriots love their religion, and, acting in accordance with its sacred teachings, they honor the dead, love and respect places of burial.

THE CEMETERIES OF MONTREAL

FROM THE DATE OF ITS FOUNDATION (1642) TO THE PRESENT DAY.

CHAPTER III.

"POINTE A CALLIÈRE" CEMETERY.

Immediately after the settlers, brought over from France, by Mr. de Maisonneuve, had arrived at the spot destined to be Montreal later on, they took the necessary steps to protect themselves against the attacks of the Indians who then infested the country, and, for that purpose, they built a fort where the whole colony were to live.

This fort was placed in a triangle, formed, on one side, by the river St. Lawrence, and, on another, by a small stream flowing into the river. Besides being easily protected against the attacks of the Indians, on account of the water which surrounded it, this fort was a most agreeable spot. Adjoining the small stream, was a large meadow enlivened with the warblings of beautifully feathered birds, and adorned with a variety of the most exquisite flowers.

Champlain had already noted this spot and named it "Place Royale", or Royal Square, and here it was that the settlers lived, during the first years. It was becoming that the first cemetery should also be there.

This first cemetery was quite near the fort and was known under the name of "Pointe à Callière cemetery". It was used for sepultures until the year 1654.

CHAPTER IV.

THE NEW HOSPITAL CEMETERY.

By its position, the Pointe à Callière cemetery was frequently flooded, when the water in the river rose very high. It was then impossible to use it and burials had to be made elsewhere, as was the case, on the 15th January 1654, for François Dhaidin.

In order to obviate this serious inconvenience, Mr. de Maisonnneuve gave a piece of land to the corporation, for a new cemetery, but on condition that said land would revert to the seigniors, if the sepultures were transferred elsewhere. This new cemetery was established on the hill, in a lot now occupied by Place d'Armes, and as this was near the hospital, it was called the new hospital cemetery. It is described as such in the certificate of registry of death of François Lochol, dated 11th December 1654, and signed by Rev. Father Pigart, S. J. The parishoners paid the cost of establishing this cemetery.

Several years after, the inhabitants of Ville-

Marie being informed that cattle entered the cemetery, resolved to put a stop to this and held a meeting, after vespers, on the 30th November 1674, St. Andrew's day, in one of the halls of the Seminary. Were present at this meeting: Mr. Perrot, parish priest; Mr. Gabriel Souart, former parish priest and superior of the Seminary; Mr. Jean Migeon, counsellor of the Paris parliament; Benigne Bastet, registrar tabellion of the bailiwick of Montreal, and several notables, and it was resolved to build a fence with piles.

Although the general custom was that the parish church of each locality, the cemetery and its fence, were kept in order by the parishoners, such was not the case in Ville-Marie, at that time, for we find that, at this same meeting of the 30th November, it was also resolved "to name a parishoner, in each ward, to accompany Mr. Jean Fremont, priest of the Seminary, to go and collect the alms which each citizen would be willing to give.

A chapel had been built in this cemetery, at the spot where the bank of Montreal now stands, to place dead bodies which did not enter the church. A service was held there, the same as is now done at the cemetery of Notre-Dame des Neiges.

Although the hospital cemetery had been abandoned in 1799, the chapel above referred to was destroyed in 1816 only.

In the last mentioned year, on the 8th of January, Mr. LeSaulnier, priest of the Seminary of St. Sulpice, and François de Laperrière, chief church-warden, addressed a petition to His Lordship the bishop of Quebec, in which they stated:

" 1° That the fortification commissioners of this city (Montreal), wishing, for the general good, to widen St. James street, have asked the church-wardens of the parish, to give up to them the lot where the sexton's house stands, with that part of the cemetery situated between said house and that of Dr. Ledel, on Place d'Armes, said commissioners offering to said church-wardens, as compensation, the sum of six hundred livres, currency of this province, and an adjoining lot, more extensive, near the ramparts.

" 2° That the meeting of the parish priest and church-wardens, held for that purpose on the 31st of last month, having discussed this offer, was unanimously in favor of accepting it, if Your Lordship will kindly assent to it .....

" For these reasons, the undersigned humbly pray Your Lordship to favorably consider this exchange, and to authorize the Fabrique to destroy the chapel where corpses are laid, and to disinter a few corpses which have been buried in said cemetery, nearly twenty years ago, in order to give up said land to said commissioners, in the month of May of next year."

His Lordship the bishop of Quebec gave his authorization, as follows, on the 13th of January :—

" Granted on the terms and conditions mentioned in the present petition.

" Signed, † J. O., Bishop of Quebec.

CHAPTER V.

CEMETERY OF THE POWDER MAGAZINE.

In 1748, the hospital cemetery had become too small, and there was no place " to bury the poor of the parish."

A meeting, composed of Mr. Louis Normant, Superior of the Seminary and parish priest of the city, grand vicar of the bishop of Quebec ; of Mr. Antoine Déat, vicar of the parish, and of the old and new church-wardens, was held, on the 29th of July 1748, in one of the halls of the Seminary, to discuss this important question.

It was resolved that the parish priest and the chief church-warden would purchase, to serve as a cemetery for the poor, " a lot of land belonging to Mr. Robert, situated at Montreal, near the powder magazine, and being about a quarter of an acre in area."

But, " a declaration of His Majesty, dated the 25th November 1743 ", seemed to be an obstacle to the purchase of this land, and, for this reason, it was resolved, at the same meeting, that the parish priest and the chief church warden would address a petition to the Commander General and to the Intendant of Justice, Police and Finance, of la Nouvelle France, to pray them to authorize the purchase of this land.

On the 27th February 1749, Rolland Michel Barin, marquis of la Galissonnière, knight of the military order of St. Louis, captain of the King's navy, commander general for His Majesty, in the whole of la Nouvelle France, the lands and territory of Louisiana, and François Bigot, King's councillor in his councils, Intendant of Justice, Police, Finance and Marine, granted, in the folfowing terms, the authorization asked in the petition: —

" Considering the petition, we authorize the parish priest and church-wardens of this city (Montreal), to purchase the land here above mentioned, for the burial of the poor of said parish.

" Signed, La Galissonnière, Bigot."

Authorization having been obtained, work was commenced at once, and the powder magazine cemetery was soon established. We see that, at a meeting of the parish priest and of the old and new church wardens, held in 1751, it was resolved to build a wall around this cemetery and also to build a dead-house, wherein to place the corpses, during the winter.

CHAPTER VI.

THE ST. ANTOINE SUBURB'S CEMETERY.

In 1799, the hospital and powder-magazine cemeteries ceased to be used for burials, and were abandoned for a new place of interment, situated in the St. Antoine suburb.

The reason for this was as follows:

At this period, the grand jury having noticed that these cemeteries, so near habitations, were a cause of unhealthiness and a danger for public health, addressed a report to the Attorney General, Mr. Sewell, calling his attention to the danger resulting from these cemeteries, and asking him that they be transferred.

The Attorney General at once submitted the grand jury's report to the parish priest and church-wardens. A meeting of the old and new church-wardens followed, at which it was resolved to act in accordance with the suggestions of the grand jury, and to buy a piece of land there to transfer the cemeteries.

This land was purchased at Coteau St. Louis, in the St. Antoine suburb. It belonged to Mr. Pierre Guy and measured four acres in area. It was paid 1,500 livres. This cemetery occupied the space now forming part of Dominion square, and it was, later on, widened by that portion of land where the new cathedral is now built.

The citizens of Montreal and vicinity were buried in this cemetery until the year 1854.

CHAPTER VII.

PURCHASE OF THE NOTRE-DAME DES NEIGES CEMETERY.

The St. Antoine cemetery having become too small for the requirements of the increasing population of the city and suburbs, it was resolved, at a meeting of the Fabrique Board, held on the 17th July 1853, to select a proper piece of land, to make a new cemetery. A committee of five church-wardens, Messrs. Pierre Jodoin, chief warden, Ephrem Hudon, A. M. Delisle, Jean Bruneau and Romuald Trudeau, was appointed to look after a proper site, and was requested to report at their earliest possible convenience. At a meeting held on the 31st July 1853, the committee appointed by a resolution passed at a general meeting of the church-wardens of the Fabrique of Montreal, on the 17th inst., reported as follows:—

Your committee have the honor to report:

"That, having examined a number of farms, in different sections adjoining the city of Montreal, they found very few pieces of land having the required size and being located so as to meet the requirements of your corporation. However, your committee are happy to state that they found one piece of land which, they trust, will meet your approbation. It is situated on the Côte des Neiges road, at a distance of about twenty acres from the toll-gate, and belongs to doctor Pierre Beaubien.

" There is a frontage of five acres on the above mentioned road, and the farm is twenty-three acres deep. There is a grove of about twenty-five or thirty acres, and eighty-five acres are plough-land, the whole forming an area of one hundred and fifteen acres.

" As regards the price, your committee are of opinion that it is not excessive, being only about thirty pounds an acre. They consequently advise the immediate purchase of same.

" It was resolved that the said report, recommending the purchase of Dr. Beaubien's farm for a cemetery, be received and adopted, and that Messrs. Pierre Jodoin, chief church-warden, Jean Bruneau, E. Hudon and R. Trudeau be authorized to make such purchase, at a price of three thousand livres currency, and that they be, moreover, authorized to sign the deed of sale of said land, in the name of this Fabrique, and to present the necessary petitions, both to the religious and civil authorities, with a view to obtain the necessary permission for making such purchase."

This question remained in abeyance, and, on the 19th of March of the following year (1854), the Rev. P. Billaudèle, then superior of the Seminary and acting as parish priest, submitted to a meeting of the old and new church-wardens the necessity of securing a new cemetery. The discussion on this matter having been prolonged until seven o'clock in the evening, without any satisfactory result being arrived at, and it not being deemed advisable to sit any longer, it was resolved to put off further discussion on the matter to a meeting to be held on the following Sunday.

The Rev. Superior again explained, at this meeting, that the principal object for which it had been called was to select a site for a new cemetery, and to decide whether they would accept twenty acres of land situated at Côte St. Luke and which the Seminary offered gratuitously, in order to prevent the Fabrique from going to further expense, or if the cemetery would be located on the farm bought from Dr. Beaubien, at Côte des Neiges, provided that, in the latter case, the necessary funds be raised outside of the Fabrique's revenue.

After a lengthy discussion, it was moved by Mr. C. S. Rodier, seconded by Mr. Alexis Laframboise:

" That, in the interest of the Fabrique and of the citizens of this parish in general, the churchwardens accept with thanks the generous offer made by the Rev. Sulpician gentlemen of Montreal, of twenty acres of land situated at Côte St. Luke, for the purpose of making a catholic cemetery."

A vote being taken on this motion, it was lost, Messrs. Berthelot, Rodier, Laframboise and Leblanc voting for, and Messrs. Doucet, Belle, Boutillier, Boyer, Bruneau, Donegani, LeProhon, Hudon, Trudeau, Wilson, Desmarteau, Jodoin, Masson, Paré, LaRocque and Delisle against.

It was then resolved, by a majority of the votes: " That sincere thanks be tendered to the gentlemen of the Seminary for their generous and certainly advantageous offer, under the present circumstances of the Fabrique, but that Dr. Beaubien's farm having already been purchased for the purpose of making a cemetery, this land appearing to meet all the requirements for the object in view, and Mr. Ephrem Hudon, jointly with Mr. Pierre Jodoin, having submitted to the meeting a list of the most respectable citizens binding themselves to purchase lots therein, to the extent of two thousand seven hundred pounds, and these gentlemen having, moreover, assured the meeting that, considering the encouragement already received, they had reason to believe that all the funds necessary for this enterprise could thus be secured from the parishoners, without touching the Fabrique's revenue, the church-wardens deem it advisable to confirm the resolution passed at a meeting of the thirty first day of the month of July 1853, and to definitely use the Côte des Neiges farm, purchased from Dr. Beaubien, as a cemetery to be religiously decorated, for the use of the catholics of Montreal."

The most pressing improvements were made at once, and the cemetery was opened to the public in 1855.

CHAPTER VIII.

DESCRIPTION OF THE NOTRE-DAME DES NEIGES CEMETERY.

Splendidly situated on the slope of Mount Royal, the cemetery (a topographical plan of which is herewith annexed), has the form of an amphitheatre, extending from the foot of the mountain to its highest summit. A road dividing the catholic from the protestant cemetery, and leading to Mount Royal park, forms the boundary of our city of the dead, on the mountain top. The cemetery is encircled with the forest trees of the park and with cultivated farms. The main entrance is at Côte des Neiges, hence the name of the cemetery. This entrance opens on the splendid route extending from Montreal to St. Laurent. A monumental door-way now being erected, will very soon close this entrance with a double bay, to be furnished with an ornamental iron railing. The door-way will be surmounted with a cross and decorated with two niches, each to contain an angel sounding the trumpet of the last judgment. Two small residences with gable ends will be erected on each side of the door-way, and two stone walls will form the enclosure of the cemetery, on the Côte des Neiges road. These walls having projecting return sides joining the façade, will afford space for a very nice entrance ground. The whole will be finished in 1888, at a cost of about ten thousand dollars.

A gravelled walk shaded with trees forms the entrance to the cemetery. The first object to be seen, upon entering this walk, is a monumental wooden cross. This cross rests upon a pedestal, the four sides of which are ornamented with the hour-glass, an emblem of the rapidity of life. A carved crown of thorns adorns the centre of the cross, and the ends of the arms are in the shape of a fleur de lis. On the upper main portion of the cross is a heart in relief, with the monogram J C. This protecting monument is pleasantly situated in the middle of a garden-plot, in the axis of the entrance alley. This garden-plot is adorned with five flower baskets of different designs, and also with a cross formed of grass and flowers. Two alleys start from this point and go, one to the right, the other to the left of the cemetery. A narrow road leads to the dead-house. This dead-house, placed in the axis of the entrance, is built of stone, the roof being of sheet-iron, with ventilators having the shape of chimneys. The back portion of the dead-house disappears under the ground, right up to the roof, while the front faces on a crossway uniting the two alleys just mentioned. This dead-house is large enough to contain seven or eight hundred corpses.

From the entrance of the cemetery to the dead-house, there are no tombs, and the first to be seen is in the alley on the left hand side. It is an obelisk erected over the crypt where lay the remains of a certain number of the political victims of 37-38. This monument was erected in 1861. The façade of the crypt, built of cut stone, is rigid in appearance, as was becoming for a tomb destined to recall to mind the disasters of a nation. The only ornaments on this façade are the coat of arms of Canada, the industrious beaver and maple leaf, carved on the frontispiece. The names of the martyrs, with their ages and titles, are written on the obelisk. The only epitaph are the following simple words engraved on the pedestal :—

TO THE MARTYRS OF 37-38.

This funeral stone is the van guard tomb of the cemetery of Montreal, the sentry tomb of the catholic necropolis of Canada.

Beyond this monument, and again to the left, is the vault of the Murphy and Baker families.

On the back plan of the alley, are family lots surrounded with railings. All are furnished with horizontal or vertical tomb-stones, and with tumuli covered with flowers. These lots extend as far as the cemetery office.

The office and chapel face one another. They are well situated on a plateau or elevation, where the three main roads of the cemetery and several minor ways, form a kind of very pleasant carrefour or public place. This site is the finest in the whole cemetery, and, were it not for the tombs which are seen within a few feet, one would take this to be a garden in some villa. To the right of the office, is a conservatory recently erected and where flowers are grown for the use of families who wish to adorn their lots. The management's building contains an office, with telephone, two waiting rooms, and the superintendent's lodgings. It is surrounded with flower-gardens and a kitchen-garden. In the rear and at the side are the sheds, coach-house, wind pump, &c.

The chapel, which is equally surrounded with flower-gardens, has two entrances. Each of these entrances opens on a vestibule or hall furnished with benches and immediately adjoining the chapel proper. The coffins which the priest is to bless are placed on these benches. In the hall, to the left, on the office side, are the children's coffins; in the hall, to the right, are those of adults. Two bays, each closed by two folding doors, lead from the chapel to the halls. At the hour appointed for services, and which is announced by the sound of the bell, these bays are opened, and the priest blesses the coffins there exposed. The chapel has but one nave and its ornaments are simple. The ceiling is divided into compartments painted cameo with a gray ground. The altar is of rectangular form and painted black. On the altar screen, is an oil painting representing Jesus Christ in the sepulchre.

The nave is ornamented with stations of the cross and the following inscriptions, both in French and in English :—

"It has been decreed that man shall die once and then be judged."

"God shall render to every one according to his deeds."

The chapel is to be enlarged very soon, and it will then be much more ornamented.

In front of the offices and chapel is a real esplanade, from which an excellent view of the cemetery can be had, taking in almost its entirety.

The shape of the Notre-Dame des Neiges cemetery is that of a rectangle, and its internal arrangement is that of an English garden. Eeverything there is disposed as in a public park, and nothing has been left undone by the management and private families, to make the place attractive.

This funeral garden, which was considerably enlarged in 1872, has now an area of over three hundred acres. The cemetery proper begins at the junction of the several roads, near the office buiidings.

Three large roads, being the main alleys, start from this point and reach the two exits, at each side of the upper portion of the cemetery.

The first of these roads runs to the right and is called the savanna road, on account of the yet uncleared tract of land which it borders ; the second runs right through the centre of the cemetery and is the really main road ; the third is on the left and is known as the alley of the stations of the cross or calvary, being so called on account of the stations of the cross which adorn it.

In order not to get lost in the real maze of alleys and ways which cross the main roads, we will visit the cemetery methodically, by running through the three principal arteries and noticing the most remarkable tombs and points of interest, and, when we come across a side alley, we shall deal with it in the same manner.

The cemetery grounds being divided in sections alphabetically classified, and the lots in the sections being, in their turn, all numbered, it is an easy matter for habitual frequenters to find any given point. Nevertheless, in order to help tourists and to render the present book more useful, the different alleys will soon each be given a name, as indicated in the annexed topographical plan.

A number of monumental vaults are to be found in a line, at a short distance after entering the road to the right, near the dead-house. All these vaults are made of cut stone and are generally elegant in design.

It is impossible to describe every one of these, this book being merely a guide or indicator, so we will pass on rapidly, stopping only at the most remarkable monuments.

The first vault, in this main road, is that of Mr. Charles Wilson.

Proceeding further on, are noticed the monuments of the Jacques Désautels and Louis Dupuy families,—of the Grenier family—Darragh, and F. X. Beaudry, founder of the splendid orphan asylum erected at the corner of St. Catherine and St. Urbain streets. This vault is of white marble, the sides being of cut stone, and there is an inside chapel. The façade of the next monument, that of the Desbarats family, is adorned with four pillars of Ionic order, which form a peristyle. Then comes the Larose monument, and that of Mr Barsalou, with pilasters, niches in the intercolumniation of the pilasters, and a frontispiece surmounted with a fine solid turret, the whole of polished light yellow stone. We are now in front of the chapel and notice the monument of the Comte family, which is of quadrangular form and flanked with small bell-turrets of the same shape. Here also is the Charles Pratt tomb and the two O'Brien family vaults.

In the left corner of the alley, on the right, stands the vault of the Feniou family, made of light-yellow stone, with the door surrounded with white marble, and a bearing-wall of cut gray stone.

On the right are the tombs of the Léveillé and Louis Renaud families. The last mentioned is composed of a splendid small façade surmounted with a fine bell-turret, with statues on each of the four sides, all placed in niches. Two more niches, with statues, adorn the lower portion of the façade, the whole of light-yellow stone. A few feet further on, to the left, we find the tomb of the Fabre and Gravel families. This is the tomb of the venerable archbishop of Montreal, Monseigneur Charles Edouard Fabre. It consists of a lot with a central monument having the form of a bell-turret pyramid, with triple base, and of several graves. Near by, (section F), is the grave of Jane Gilroy, wife of Thomas McCready, who was the first person interred in the cemetery of N.-D. des Neiges, on the 27th May 1855, the year when it was founded. A number of beautiful graves call the visitor's attention, in this section of the cemetery, but the limited space of this book will not allow, although we regret it very much, to even mention them.

In front of Mgr Fabre's family tomb, is the Boyer chapel-monument. To the right of this, commences a bifurcation, the upper turning of which, and a number of alleys which open on its right, reach the savanna, or extreme right artery of the cemetery. On the left of this, alley may be noticed, among others, the tomb of the Alexis Dubord family. This is a quadrangular pyramid, on an elevated pedestal, surrounded with four pillars, and inlaid with white marble slabs. After turning the corner of this alley, we come in sight of the cemetery's inaugural monument, which is a quadrangular pyramid, about twenty feet high, and surrounded with an ornamental cast iron railing. The pyramid has the following inscription :—

" This monument was the first erected in this cemetery. It is the result of the generosity of the members of the St. Jean-Baptiste society, of Montreal, and was erected, in 1855, to the memory of Ludger Duvernay, founder of the St. Jean-Baptiste society, who died in 1851."

To the right of this monument, is the J. Beaudry lot, which contains the graves of different families, and, among others, that of ex-sheriff Leblanc.

Downwards the St. Jean Baptiste monument, is the lot of the Hon. J. A. Chapleau, secretary of State, on which stands a pyramid. A little further on, is a pillar surmounted with the statue of a fireman. Under this pillar, repose the remains of a number of firemen who died victims to their duty.

Proceeding through the same alley, we come to the Daniel Tracey monument. This is a monumental quadrangular bell-turret, of large and rich design. At each angle are pilasters, with coniform apex and with nerves, the whole being most ornamental and very elegant.

Next to this, is the lot of Mr R. J. Devins, which is surrounded with an ornamental cast iron railing. In the centre, stands an elegant quadrangular pyramid of pink and gray granite. This pyramid rests on a pedestal ending with a fine entablature, and the pedestal itself is supported by a triple base, the last of which is with a surbase.

The vaults of the Brunet, Archambault, and Feron families come next and are quite interesting. The next in order belongs to the Jodoin family and has a square façade, as most of the chapel or vault monuments in the cemetery. This tomb is of vermicular stone, and the corners are adorned with sculptures. There are also pilasters, surmounted with an hour-glass, with descending and return walls, triangular fronton, surmounted with a frustum of a pyramid having cut edges, with a cross at the summit. A very large lot lies in front of this monument which is one of the finest in the cemetery.

The Montmarquet monument, just by the side of this, is also a remarkable one. The iron door, closing the crypt or chapel, is divided into panels with gilt edges.

In the architrave, or more simply the frontispiece, are placed marble slabs—angel sounding the trumpet. The summit is adorned with a cross, and there is a return and descending or surbased wall, in the form of an S, surmounted with a conical stone.

The next tomb has a semi-circular fronton, and, in the semi-circle, an angel resting on an urn.

Then come the crypts of the Marie-Anne Guy, Villeneuve, and O. Auger families, which are all three worthy of mention. The Auger monument is the last in that section of the cemetery.

The savanna road then turns to the left and continues, in a longitudinal direction, near the lots in the centre.

At the angle formed by the turning of the road, we come across the pyramidal monument (vedet) of Mr. Doran. On our right, we see some woodland, while, on the left, are numerous family lots, with vertical and horizontal tomb stones. All these lots are under cultivation and kept in splendid order.

At a distance of about one acre, before we reach the last graves, and by the side of a small alley, which runs parallel with the one in which we now are, stands a large rough stone having the shape of a coffin or bier. This is the tomb of Guibord, of litigious memory. This tomb is the last object worthy of notice in the right hand side alley. We then cross the road leading to the exit, on the right of the cemetery, and, near that exit, we see a cottage occupied by one of the guards.

Going through the alley on the left side, we soon reach the central or main road, which is the first large road on our left.

The road which we are now about to leave runs through the upper portion of the cemetery, right to the calvary road, and, at about half way through it, at the extreme end of the cemetery, is that portion of the city of the dead which is not blessed. This is a rectangular lot, hedged in with white cedar, or rather thuja.

The main road and central sections are occupied by lovely family lots and lots belonging to religious orders.

On the family lots are numerous monuments, some of them quite costly and all very elegant. Pyramids in their various forms, pillars, cippi, and tomb stones are especially found in this section. All these lots are enclosed with quick-set hedge, chains, iron bars supported by marble or stone posts, or with ornamental wrought and cast iron railings. At about half way of the central alley, on the right, are the lots for common graves, and, at the head of each grave, is placed a small post or picket, with a number.

The lots belonging to religious orders and asylums come next, in the following order :—

St. Patrick's orphans; Asylum for the Blind; Brothers of the Christian Schools; and, on the second plan, that is in rear of the foregoing, the lots of the Grand Seminary and of the Petit Seminary (Montreal College).

All these lots have iron railings. In the centre and always on the right of the main road, are five other large lots, all disseminated. These are for the use of the members of the "Union of prayers" and are all quick-set. There are no important tombs on these lots, but, everywhere, crosses are to be seen, with an occasional tomb stone.

On the side alley, to the left of the one we are now describing, and somewhere near its centre, are seen two beautiful clumps of yew-trees on a grass-plot. Around these clumps, are some fine tombs, one of which belongs to the d'Odet d'Orsonnens family. The pyramid which adorns this lot situated in the angle formed by two roads, is ornamented with the family's coat of arms surmounted with a count's crown and the motto: Certa fides, certa manus.

On the lower left side of the central alley, are several lots and monuments worthy of notice, and, among others, those of the Clarke and Turcot, families. Once arrived at the esplanade, we turn to the right, to go up the large alley on the left of the cemetery, which is the road of the stations of the cross or calvary. The stations have the form of open chapels and are covered, both inside and outside, with tin painted in red and spotted with gray. The figures of the different stations of the cross are of carved wood, of a light red color. The twelfth station is a high calvary, with three large crosses and figures, and two statues: the weeping Virgin Mary and St. John the Evangelist.

Seen from the road, this calvary produces a grand effect. The fourteenth station is ornamented with an altar and is surrounded with the trunks of large trees.

Nothing is more edifying and more impressive than these stations of the mournful route followed by the Saviour,disseminated along the entire lenght of the cemetery. The stations of the cross are often made here by a large number of pilgrimages, composed of the different congregations and societies of the city, and also by numerous other persons always anxious to take part in these impressive devotions. In rear of several of the stations are lots for the interment of members of congregations among the laity. The first tomb, on the calvary road, is that of the J. Lorange family, on the right. It is a quadrangular pyramid. As far as the VIth station, there are, on the right and left of the calvary road, but family and congregation lots, without any monument worthy of special notice. On the other hand, these simple and modest burial places have this peculiarly attractive and even impressive feature, that a large number of the wooden tombs and crosses are adorned with the picture or photograph of the deceased person.

To the left of the VIth station, is the vault of the A. S. Hamelin family. It has the form of an egyptian pylone. Next in order is the Hébert monument, of the same form. Then comes that of the de Lorimier family, square in form, with pilasters at the corners. Finally, we come to the tomb of the Skelly family, which certainly deserves to be quite specially mentioned. It is a mausoleum having real monumental proportions, and tastefully and richly adorned. It is made of native white-gray granite, and has pilasters within the blocks of cut granite, with sarcophaguses on the sides and in the angles, and a polished panel. The façade is adorned with a niche temporarily occupied by an angel. On the façade rests a turret formed of four square pillars surmounted with a flat entablature. A funeral urn stands in the centre of the turret. On each side of the façade, is a kind of bell-turret held up by pilasters, and again this façade is further adorned, on its lower sides, with descending and return aisles. The interior of the crypt is covered with marble, and, in the walls are sixteen compartments wherein to place coffins. A fine grass-plot, on an inclined plane, lies in front of this magnificent mausoleum.

Behind this monument, is that of the Dufort family, with triangular fronton and four pilasters, after which comes that of the Dubois family. We now pass in front of the VIIth station, near which are some family lots, with pyramidal tombs. Next in view is the F. X. St. Charles gray marble vault, with polished pilasters, funeral urn, and semi-circular fronton surmounted with a cross. The Leduc family vault is of the same design. The Kavanagh tomb, with egyptian pylone, follows the VIIIth station. The crypts of the Robert and A. Brunet families are of the same style of architecture. That of Mr. Joseph Christin is of the same style as the St. Charles monument, already mentioned, and the Lenoir tomb comes next to it. Downwards the calvary road, between the VIIIth and IXth stations, is the Jérémie Perrault monument, followed by that of Mr. Prévost. The latter is of light-yellow stone, the façade being adorned with marble slabs on the sides. The door-case is of black marble, and there are spires at each corner of the monument. A monumental bell-turret, three stories high, with a cross on the top, surmounts the whole structure, and, in the lower story of the turret, is a niche. The interior of the crypt is paved with marble and contains a compartment for coffins. After the IXth station, comes the Eugène Malo monument, which is a granite square, with angels at the corners, and a cross on the summit. This is the last monument worthy of notice, on the calvary road. Beyond, are found a few family lots, on the left, and simple monuments inside a congregation lot, on the right, behind the Xth station. To the right of this station, is the upper road of the cemetery, called the St. Jean-Baptiste road. On the left side of this road is noticed, among many others, the lot of Sir George Etienne Cartier. This lot, on an elevated grass-plot, is fenced in with an ornamental circular iron railing having four doors. The doors are profusely ornamented, and, on each, is the coat of arms, with the motto of the Cartier family: " Franc et sans dol."

The calvary, just near by, is the last very interesting point on the road now being visited, its picturesque site and imposing aspect producing a deep impression. Then comes the XIVth station, which is a very remarkable one, and the road turns to the left, in the direction of the lower portion of the cemetery, passing in front of three tombs. Near the McCready crypt, which is the last and most remarkable of these tombs, the calvary road describes an angle and ends near where it commenced, in front of the second station.

By following the calvary road, from the fourteenth station, a splendid view of the St. Lawrence and the island of Montreal is obtained, and this view brings to a most agreeable end a visit through the calvary road.

The calvary and savanna roads are the two alleys which contain the finest and most interesting tombs in the cemetery.

Although comparatively new, the Montreal cemetery is one of the finest in America. It has the finest site of any cemetery in the new world, and it is certainly the most important catholic necropolis in Canada.

With its present improvements, the catholic cemetery of this city may be valued at half a million dollars.

BY–LAW

CONCERNING THE NOTRE-DAME DES-NEIGES CEMETERY, ADOPTED AT A GENERAL MEETING OF THE OLD AND NEW CHURCH-WARDENS OF THE "ŒUVRE ET FABRIQUE" OF THE PARISH OF NOTRE-DAME, MONTREAL.

Amended at different times, by the Board of Management, and approved by His Lordship Mgr Edouard-Charles Fabre, archbishop of Montreal, on the 22nd. August 1887.

BY–LAW

CONCERNING THE KEEPING AND ADMINISTRATION OF NOTRE-DAME-DES-NEIGES CEMETERY.

The Parish Priest and Church-wardens of the "Œuvre et Fabrique" of the parish of Notre-Dame, Montreal, ordain as follows :—

REGISTRATION OF DEATHS.

Every day during the year, except Sundays and holidays, persons deceased must be registered at the Fabrique office, between the hours of 9 A. M. and 5 P. M. During other hours, and on Sundays and holidays, they must be registered in the vestry.

Persons calling for registration must furnish :

1. A permit of burial from deceased's Rev. parish priest ;

2. A certificate from the doctor who attended deceased, said certificate mentioning the name, sex, age, occupation, nationality, date and cause of death.

DAYS AND HOURS FOR INTERMENTS.

1. Every day during the year, except Sundays and holidays, at 9.15, 10 and 10.45 o'clock in the morning.

2. During the months of June, July and August, on Sundays and holidays, and also during the three last days of the Holy Week, at 3.30 o'clock in the afternoon.

3. Persons wishing the priest to wait after the above mentioned hours, are requested to notify, in due time, the Rev. parish priest or his representative, or again the clerk having charge of the registration of burials, at the Fabrique office.

4. No corpse shall be admitted in the cemetery, without the certificate of registration from the Fabrique office.

II. Such registration shall be made in a book specially kept for that purpose, and shall contain the number of the interment, the names and surname, occupation, date of death, place of birth, residence, age, and the disease or cause of death of the deceased person, together with the amount paid for such interment.

III. At the entry of such registration, a sum of four dollars and sixty-five cents shall be then and there paid, for the interment of each adult, and a sum of two dollars and fifty cents, for the interment of each child.

IV. It shall be the duty of the person having charge of the registration of deaths, to give to the party representing the deceased, a registration memorandum, which shall indicate the date, name and surname, occupation, age, payment or non payment for the interment, and the kind of burial which the ecclesiastical authorities shall have thought fit to allow, and mention the refusal of an ecclesiastical burial when the ecclesiastical authorities have so decreed it.

Should the deceased have come to his death through any contagious or pestilential disease, mention thereof shall be made in the said memorandum.

V. The Fabrique shall cause to be interred gratuitously, in a common grave, the body of any person whose family is known to be too poor to pay for the interment.

BURIAL LOTS.

VI. The Fabrique may concede, in the said Cemetery, lots for the interment of members of the grantee's family, professing the Roman Catholic Religion, interred with the honors of an ecclesiastical burial. The price of lots is 40, 50, 60 and 75 cents, according to locality. These lots can be bought either at the cemetery, the purchase price being paid there, or at the Fabrique office, as one may please.

VII. The lots may be of different sizes and configuration, according to the locality, but shall, in no case, be less than fifty superficial feet; a space of not less than one foot shall intervene between each lot. If, however, several contiguous lots be held by the same person, or if several grantees having adjoining lots, desire to enclose them as one lot, the said Fabrique may, if they deem it advisable, concede at the same time the intervening space between each such lot.

VIII. No grantee shall have the right to inter any body in his lot, nor to enclose it, nor to put anything thereon, unless the entire price of said lot shall have been paid, or some other agreement entered into.

IX. Every burial lot, used by the grantee or his representatives, for the interment of one or more bodies, the price of which shall not have been paid within six months after it becomes due, shall be confiscated to the Fabrique, as well as all payments made thereon, and all property rights which the grantee of such lot may possess, in virtue of any deed of sale, concession, or other title to such lot, shall thereby become null and void, to all intents and purposes.

And in case any interment should have taken place, on the lot so confiscated, the Fabrique shall reimburse, without interest, to the grantee or his representatives, the amount of purchase money paid on account for said lot.

X. Each and every grantee of any such lot, shall be bound, immediately after purchasing it :

1. To enclose said lot or, at least, to place, at the four corners thereof, iron or stone boundaries, on one of which (that in front) shall be marked the number and section of said lot ; and if, owing to any neglect, on the part of said grantee, to conform to the foregoing, it should become impossible to find out said lot, or that it should be resold to another party, the Fabrique shall have the right to offer him another lot, of similar area, and he shall be bound to accept the same.

2. Not to place or erect, on said lot, any monument, fence, tablet, tombstone, or any work whatsoever, without having previously submitted the plans to the Fabrique, and obtained the sanction of the Curé (Parish Priest).

3. Not to cause any grave to be dug, on said lot, by other persons than those appointed for that work by the Fabrique, and without having obtained a permit from the office of the said Fabrique.

4. To maintain in good order the monuments, fences, or any other construction erected on said lot.

5. To sign with the Fabrique an authentic deed for the concession of said lot and pay the cost thereof. But no deed shall be granted for any lot in said Cemetery, unless the grantee shall have paid the full price thereof.

6. Not to grant, sell nor transfer his rights in said lot unto any body else, without the written consent of the said Fabrique, and finally, to conform to all By-laws now existing or which may hereafter be made for the better administration of the said Cemetery.

XI. In case of infraction of any of the dispositions of the second paragraph of the tenth section of this By-law, the Fabrique may cause all inscriptions to be effaced and remove therefrom any matter or thing which, according to the decision of the Bishop or Parish Priest, should not be deemed suitable for a Catholic Cemetery.

XII. No fence or enclosure of any lot shall exceed twenty inches in height, when made of stone or marble, and thirty inches, if in cast iron or iron.

Wooden fences or wooden enclosures are prohibited, with the exception of quickset hedges.

XIII. If any tree, shrub or plant on any lot be an annoyance to the adjoining lots, or prevents circulation in any of the avenues or paths, the Fabrique alone may root them up, cut and carry them away.

XIV. The Fabrique shall not be bound, in any way or manner, during the winter season, to keep open any avenue or path leading to the lots or graves so conceded, and if any grantee desires to inter, during the said winter season, in any such lot or grave, the avenues or paths leading thereto shall be marked out and opened at his own cost and expense.

XV. The Fabrique will undertake to lay out and decorate said lots, upon payment, invariably in advance, of a reasonable compensation.

XVI. All orders for the making of graves on any lot, must be transmitted to the Fabrique office, a day in advance

XVII. The Fabrique will undertake, for a fee of twenty-five cents, to transmit, by telephone, all orders for the opening of graves.

SINGLE GRAVES.

XVIII. The Fabrique may concede, at a price of 50 cents per foot, single graves for the use of Roman Catholics, interred with the honors of an ecclesiastical burial.

XIX Such graves shall be numbered and shall measure 8 x 3 feet, or contain a superficial area of twenty-four feet.

A space of 6 inches will be left between such graves.

XX. The said graves shall, in no case, be closed in nor receive any monument, except a cross or tombstone, the width of which shall not exceed two feet.

XXI. The different provisions of this By-law relating to burial lots, shall apply to single graves, except such as are contrary to or inconsistent with the two preceding sections.

ORDINARY GRAVES.

XXII. The Fabrique may, with the consent of the Parish Priest, set apart, from time to time, such portion of the Cemetery as may be deemed advisable, (with the exception however of the portion already reserved for lots and single graves,) for the interment, with ecclesiastical burial, of bodies not having a lot or single grave and for which the Burial fees have been paid. Such portion shall be divided into two sections, one for adults and the other for children.

XXIII. The Fabrique may also reserve, out of the section for ordinary graves, such area of ground as they may deem fit, for the interment of members of the confraternity of " l'Union de Prières. "

XXIV. A cross or tombstone may be placed on an ordinary grave, for a term of five years, from the day of interment, for which a sum of twenty-five cents shall be paid to the Fabrique, and no other monument or construction whatsoever shall be placed over said graves.

XXV. Five years from the date of the interment, the said Fabrique may inter anew in such ordinary graves.

XXVI. Every individual, having a right, according to the rules of the Church, to an ecclesiastical burial, but for whom the dues for interment have not been paid, shall be buried in a common grave and shall not in any case be disinterred.

XXVII. No monument, tombstone or other erection shall be placed on such common graves.

XXVIII. The Fabrique shall set apart and keep enclosed, in said Cemetery, a certain space of land divided in two, the one for the interment of unbaptized children, and the other for persons nominally belonging to the Catholic Church, but who shall be judged unworthy of an ecclesiastical burial.

XXIX. Each adult's grave shall be dug to a depth of four feet, and if a request be made to have it dug deeper, fifty cents shall be paid for the first foot, sixty-five for the second, and so on for each and every additional foot, for which an additionnal sum of fifteen cents shall be paid.

XXX. Each child's grave shall be dug to a depth of three feet, and for each additional foot in depth, thirty cents shall be paid for the first, forty for the second, and so on.

DISINTERMENTS.

XXXI. No body shall be disinterred, to be reburied in said Cemetery, without a written request from one of the nearest relatives or representatives, and without a permit from the Parish Priest of Notre-Dame XXXII. A sum of four dollars shall be paid for the disinterment of an adult in the said Cemetery, and a sum of two dollars for that of a child.

DEAD HOUSE.

XXXIII. Bodies may be placed in the dead house of the Cemetery, from the first of November, till the first day of May in each year, except such as may have died of contagious diseases.

XXXIV. The Superintendent of the Cemetery shall not, without an order from the Fabrique, deposit in said dead house any body, unless payment of the dead house dues be made to himself.

XXXV. It shall be the duty of the said Superintendent, when depositing any body in the said dead house, to place on the coffin, in a solid manner a check, a duplicate of which shall be remitted to the family, for identification when necessary, and to place above the said check, a small card bearing the name of the deceased.

XXXVI. Each and every body so deposited shall be buried within the twenty first days of the month of May in each year, and, should the family fail to appear within the time so specified, the Fabrique may inter themselves all such unreclaimed bodies.

XXXVII. Every person, claiming any body so deposited in the said dead-house, shall there and then identify the coffin and return to the Superintendent of the said Cemetery his duplicate check, but in no case shall it be lawful to open any coffin.

XXXVIII. A sum of two dollars, entrance fee, and of fifty cents per month, for each and every adult, shall be exigible and paid in advance for dead-house fees and transfer of the body from said place to the grave, and, for each child, an entrance fee of one dollar and twenty-five cents, and twenty-five cents per month.

DIVERS.

XXXIX. The gates of the Cemetery shall be open daily from sunrise to sunset, except on Sundays and Holidays, when they will be closed in the forenoon.

XL. On Sundays and Holidays, it is strictly forbidden to perform any manual labour in said Cemetery.

XLI. Drivers of carriages are prohibited from driving at a quicker pace than a walk.

XLII. All contractors or laborers employed in the construction of monuments, vaults, dead-houses, or at the enclosure of lots, shall be subject to the control and direction of the Superintendent of the Cemetery; and all such contractors and laborers offending against the present provision, may be deprived of the right to work in said Cemetery.

XLIII. The Superintendent of the said Cemetery shall be bound to maintain order therein, and shall for such purpose, have under his command to aid him in the performance of his duties, a sufficient number of constables.

XLIV. It shall be the duty of the said constables to arrest any person contravening or offending against the following provisions of the Act concerning the Cemetery of Notre-Dame des Neiges, passed in the thirty-fifth year of Her Majesty's reign, chapter 44 of the Statutes of Quebec.

" 16. If any person, in the said Cemetery :

" 1. Creates any disturbance, or idles about without any apparent good motive or behaves in an indecent manner, or sells or offers for sale any liquor, fruit, cakes, candy or any other article whatsoever, or forms part of a pleasure party or of any profane assemblage, or resists or refuses to withdraw from the premises when ordered so to do by any person in charge or the keeper of the said Cemetery, acting in the execution of his duties ;

" 2. Or wilfully or maliciously destroys, injures, mutilates, deforms or removes any tablet, tombstone, monument or other erection aforesaid, or of any burying lot within the said Cemetery, or wilfully or maliciously destroys, cuts, breaks or injures any tree, shrub, plant, flower within the limits of the said Cemetery, or plays at any game, or discharges fire arms (excepting in cases of military funerals) or disturbs the persons assembled in the said Cemetery for the burial of a body, or in fine commits any nuisance whatsoever within the said Cemetery ;

" Any such person so offending and contravening as aforesaid, may be arrested by any person in charge or keeper as aforesaid, and taken before a justice of the peace or any other court having competent jurisdiction in the premises, and shall be liable, for each such offence, to a penalty not exceeding fifty dollars and of not less than five dollars, according to the nature of the offence, and in default of payment of such penalty, such person shall be liable to an imprisonment in the common jail of the District of Montreal, during a period of not less than five days and not exceeding one month.

" 17. And such person so offending and contravening shall be also liable to an action for trespass, before any court of competent jurisdiction, and such action shall be instituted by the said Fabrique for the payment of all damages that may have been caused by such illegal acts ; and the amount of the said penalty, if paid, and of such damages, shall be applied, under the direction of the said Fabrique, either to the keeping of or repairs to the said Cemetery, or to the burial of the poor who are interred therein."
